

Well I think that says it all, can't quite believe I am doing the London Marathon later this month and I'm quite terrified. The fact that it is for such a good cause makes it worthwhile and if anyone would like to sponsor me I would be very grateful - all goes directly to the NSPCC, the link is www.justgiving.com/fundraising/SuzanneOsbornemarathon (don't forget gift aid too).

The NSPCC are the only charity fighting to end child abuse in the U.K. and Channel Islands. I have seen the invaluable help they give first hand through work and am happy to do my bit to support them.

Huge thanks for your support, I may also require support walking during the first week after the Easter holidays! (Matilda doesn't understand why we have to go to London 'just to go for a run', but is coming down to support me anyway, I think she is more excited about the train!)
